Nixon Hints Strongly at Veto Of Trade Bill in Present Form

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (AP).-President Nixon hinted strongly today that he will veto the pending foreign trade hill unless drastic changes are made in the measure.

In a letter to Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott, Mr. Nixon said the legislation possed by the Senate Finance Committee yesterday "goes far beyond" his proposals "and falls far short in

Mr. Nixon said the changes could have harmful short-term consequences and, in the long run, "could trigger international trade practices destructive of the economy of the entire free world." Mr. Nixon told Sen. Scott he supports the present bill's provisions limiting imports of textiles. He also supports authorization to create Domestic International Sales Corporations—basically a way to give a tax break to U.S. exports, which the committee

He indicated disapproval of the shoe import quota provision and said that the bill in its present form "would invite import restrictions on numerous additional products."

Mr. Nixon told Sen. Scott the "well being of the United . States requires new trade legislation" but he urged that the Senate put the bill "into acceptable form" for his signature. He called on the Senate specifically to eliminate the high tariff system on certain chemical imports (the American Selling Price system), a special bone of contention with Europeans.

In dress blues and gold alguillettes, 1st Lt. Linda C. White, USMC, was the one who stood at the First Lady's side yesterday while Mrs. Nixon received 350 delegates to the second international Clean Air Congress.

Lt. White, 24, said she did not volunteer for the glamour job. "It just floated down from above," she explained, gesturing with immaculate white gloves. Her duty was to direct the guests toward a buffet table set with punchbowls and plates of Christmas cookies after they bad met the President's wife.

Asked whether the military women will be expected to ask unaccompanied male guests to dance with them at White House social events, Lucy Winchester, social secretary to Mrs. Nixon, said "no." But they will be expected to dance with stag guests who ask them, she said.

The five are not the first of their sex to serve with the White House's flexible corps of 20-30 social aides. Mrs. Nixon said that last year the first woman, Capt. Nancy Buzzard, USAF, went up the ladder, so I asked when we were going to get

Belgium Moves

The proposed reforms will give more autonomy to Belgium's French Fiemish-speaking language groups in their respective areas. Mr. Eyskens won the necessar two-thirds majority in the House of Representatives in voting after a marathon 12-hour session of parliament ended early today. The bill now goes to the Senate.

The vote broke a two-year deadlock on the constitutional reforms persistently blocked by militant French and Flemish-speaking groups in parliament.

The Extraordinary Vision of J.M.W. Turner

By Rona Dobson

PRUSSELS - Obtaining the first-ever overseas loan of 100 specially chosen watercolors by J. M. W. Turner is something of a scoop for the Belgian Fine Arts authorities and for the British Council, sponsors of the cross-Channel operation. And it is also a morale builder for the Brussels Museum of Modern Art, still in cramped provisional premises after years of walting for new quarters.

Considered by many-including scholar-critic Sir Kenneth Clark-to be by far the greatest painter England has ever produced. Turner, in the late 18th and early 19th century, soared away from all the placed color conventions imprisoning his contemporaries. In 1816. Willlam Hazlitt, in one of his "Found Table" essays, discussed Turner in obviously puzzled terms. Although Hazlitt recognized that Turner was the "ablest landscape - painter now living ... painting pictures of the elements of air, earth, and water," he sternly qualified them as being too much ahstractions of aerial perspective...

In the Brussels exhibition, the whole span of Turner's subtle and seemingly unbounded color range can be seen. These are watercolors of 19th-century Europe, showing lakes, citles, rivers, carhedrals and castles that Turner visited on his many voyages. On these trips, he used to take tremendously long walks. over mountain passes, along endless river banks, through unknown city streets. He would be up at dawn for a mountain sunrise, out on a lake at midnight to watch the night sky on the water. Then, back to England with a great stack of skerchbooks, full of material for later development.

The "development" was seldom conventional. Even his view of Venice is fresh and different, familiar outlines of palaces and bell towers subordinated to the almost phosphorescent flow of light. The Doges' Palace, glinting pale gold, floasts tenuously in a wash of surrounding blues; the Dogana and distant Zitella are outlines on a sky filling with dawn; an outdoor theater is an "aerial abstraction" of bold whirling red reflections and spectral white spaces.

Turner's Paris Turner's Paris is a lively, peopled place where crowds parade along the Seine, And St. Cloud is all woody slopes above a rural riverside.

PARIS, Dec. 10-Fads have tbeir advantages: they allow you to pursue certain unfashionable pleasures at minimal cost and with no competi-

Take white wines, for instance. The current snobbery is to drink only the dry ones and to look down the end of one's nose at the sweet wices of Sauternes as being fit only for little old ladies left over from the Victorian era.

On the left bank of the Garoune 25 miles southeast of Bordeaux, Sauternes is considered by many connoisseurs to produce the greatest white wines in the world. (Apropos-and dictionaries be damned—many wine lovers think that the cor-rect spelling ought to retain the final "s," to set them off from their California copies which, using the English spelling, do not have it on their

Of course the anti-Sauternes ient does not apply to the first great growth, Chateau d'Yquem, which is drunk not for its fahulous qualities but hecause it is so famous and so expensive that it must be right to drink it.

But there are many others, the first and second growths. some of which can be nearly as good as a Château d'Youem although they cost anywhere from haif to a quarter as much. In fact, you can often buy superb

Timid Signs

Why these magnificent golden wines fell so low in esteem (Château d'Yquem bas even produced a dry wine under another name) is a mystery but now is the time to take advantage of it, for the first timid signs of a return to favor have already begun to appear in France.

This is also the best time of year to drink rich, sweet wines. They are easier to take in cold weather and they go well with much of the rich, holiday fare. About the only thing Sau-ternes are still generally served with is dessert, a striking indication of contemporary lack of imagination. Only the sugar in this great wine is being made use of against the sugar in the dessert, and this can at times make for a cloying amount of Sauternes is much better with fruit, but it is as good at the glass of Sauternes makes a perfect aperitif and it does very nicely with oysters.

Yes, oysters. Not the more acid Portugaises fines de clai-res and spéciales hut the flat Belon type whose marine fat-ness matches both the soft glycerine and the faint taste of Sauternes is a fine accompaniment to fish prepared with rich cream sauces, especially when the same wine has gone into the sauce, and this would be equally true of veal or chick-

What wine could possibly hetter harmonize with canard a l'orange, matching both the strong taste of the duck and the sweetness of the sauce? Or roast pork with peaches? Sauternes itself, the natives drink it with simple roast chicken and it even goes with game such as quail with cherries or muscat grapes.

The fact that its mellow richness is also very good with Roquefort cheese brings us full circle back to dessert. Thus Santernes can accompany an entire meal, as can any wine, provided that the meal is built around the wine rather than Naturally, all the above applies to Barsac which is Santernes because it has the legal right to either name. There are subtle differences due to soil and exposure, for Barsac is grown on flat land and Sauternes on gently rolling terrain. Barsac tends to be slightly less sweet and rich but with a somewhat more fruity fragrance than Sauternes.

Turner is prodigal with the deeper, colder shades to capture the mountains, lakes and glaciers. The scenes have calm serenity except when a sudden storm of snow winds hears down on two human figures at a dark center point.

The English paintings inworth Castle, home of the Earl of Egremont, a friend and one of his patrons. They are unusual in that several show interiors, a relatively rare subject for Turner. Although the pictures are softly blurred as his skies and sunsets, they are still distinctly rooms, with decorated ceilings, chandeliers, groups of people-rather like a stage set slightly out of focus.

But for all his deliberately abstract technique, Turner was unassailable in his draftsmanship and observation. The architectural detail, topographical outlines, indications of people in a scene emerge enhanced hy all the inspired intoxication of color. The watercolor of Lucerne, for example, shows the town in clear detail; the turreted towers and castles look like mirages - but they are real

This show is hand-picked for quality. One or two of Turner's earlier paintings have been included to illustrate his progress from the artificial, heavily classical style, of crumbling pillars and romantic ruins, which he discarded eventually as too con-trived. These early works underline the extraordinary thrust of a powerful vision that carried forward from his own era into the future.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—This is how critics rate new plays: "Mahabharata," a Kathakail dance drama from Kerala in Southern India, presented at Hunter College by the Kerala Kalamandalum Kathakali company on its first U.S. tour. "is like nothing seen in the West hefore," writes Clive Barnes of The New York Times. "Most of the Indian dancing we have seen has been either Bharata Natyam, or Kathak . . . Kathakall is far more dramatic." The company, he says, is "clear!? wonderful," and you "don't have to know about Kathakali dance to recognize its authority and excellence." Barnes, who was seeing Kathakall dance drama for the first time, said there were times he was "most extraordinarily bored—especially at the beginning." But, looking back, it "is not the boredom I really recall but the moments of company scheduled three performances in New York, each one different. "Mahahharata" was the first to be presented.

 That many parents, as well as the students themselves, have a genuine interest in the European country in which they are living, and the language and culture of the country.

• That the international schools and colleges available provide, in their view, a standard of high school and college education which will be accepted by U.S. universities and business organizations if the students should decide to return to the United States to work or continue their studies at some later stage.

 The snob factor, largely stemming from parents who want to reap the kudos which are allegedly derived from being able to say that their youngster was educated at such-and-such school or college in Paris Rome. Geneva or elsewhere in Europe.

Certainly, student violence, the disruption of studies and the problem of drugs in the United States have had a considerable infinence on the attitude of the parents in particular, as well as the students

The existence of similar problems in Europe is recognized, but they are thought to be less intense generally and sporadic by comparison with the sustained level prevailing in the Unit-

U.S. Curricula

The result has been a marked increase in the number of schools and colleges in Britain and Europe which specialize in providing an American cur-

In one leading college tailored for American students in Paris some 65 percent of the 320 students are the offspring of Americans who are living in Europe on a long-term basis. About 12 percent of the student body are non-American, and the remainder are either sent to Europe to study by their parents in the United States, or decide themselves to come to Europe to study.

The proportion is similar at a college in Britain which now offers a full four-year bachelor's degree especially for American

About 50 percent of this col-

American families living in Europe, and some 15 percent are mainder come from the States.

There are two major reasons for the presence of the "for-eign" element in schools and lleges orientated toward an American-style education.

Firstly, the schools and colleges regard as essential a percentage of suitable non-American students because the mix-ture of nationalities, races and languages is recognized as an essential ingredient for such international institutions. Secondly, according to one college lecturer, it exists because "the parents, or the non-American students themselves, have no faith in their own institutions or education."

Students who are sent by their parents in the United States to come here and qualify the easy way . And wa are not interested.

in that type of student." While the intention of this college is to provide a two year arts degree course and thus prepare American students for their return to the United States to take the full four-year bachelor degrees there is an increasing tendency for students to continue their studies in Europe, rather than return to the United States

Most go to Britain, which offers degrees that are welcomed and recognized in most cases in the U.S. Some go to German where else, and they are interested in living, which they can

"They have virtually no involvement in local student political movements. They are well aware of the CRS (French riot police) and the statute regarding the expulsion of atudents. They go along to demon-strations just to gawk and take a look, but few take part.

They do not identify with local student demonstrations... and nor do they identify with student demonstrations in the States "

He qualified this by adding

A key factor in the status of these institutions in Europe is their ability to become accredited to one of the regional associations of colleges and secondary schools in the United States. This is a difficult process, and not many make the grade. A primary qualification is whether the school or college is a profitmaking, or non-profit-making concern. These associations do not accept profit-making institutions for membership.

The purpose of this is to ensure in schools and colleges in Europe a standard which is compatible with schools, and standard, and so we must wait and see.

However, the two colleges in Europe which have started these four-year bachelor degree courses are both profit-making concerns, and that, in itself, is enough to cause alarm to the academics of the non-profitmaking colleges.

What is the standard of these secondary school and college institutions in Europe?

One senior professor and col-lege administrator in Paris said that in his view there were only five or six colleges in Europa and Britain where the advertised American system of teaching was fulfilled to any standard acceptable in the United

With regard to secondary, or high, schools, he said that the standard was about average, by comparison with the United States, on the basis of the qualifications of the applicants at his college.

"We would like them to be hetter, naturally, but they are about on average with high school applicants in the States."

One college which offers 11 scholarships for entry each year would like, according to the registrar, to offer more, "We would like, for instance, to be able to give scholarships to attract the children of-shall we say-tha U.S. service sergeants serving in Britain and Germany, and who produce kids just as intelligent as any, but don't have the money to send them to colleges in Europe such as this,"

He was quick to add that his college, a non-profit-making concern, is not a wealthy institution, and that its fees, including book and miscellaneous charges, amount to $1,575 a year. This sum was reduced slightly for foreigners, who would nevertheless find fees expensive by comparison with their own institutions. He also stressed that it was cheaper for an American student to attend his college than to attend, for instance, George Washington University in Washington D.C.

About 40 of this college's student body of more than 300 come from parents who are in the U.S. military or diplomatic cervice, and thus are subject, as a result of their father's ington at short notice.

For this reason the college has a reciprocal arrangement with the George Washington University, under which it will take up to 50 sophomore stu-dents from Washington each year on a one-year course of work, to landing back in Wash-

In return, any one of its students who is 'recommended' by the college—and recommended means that the college cannot hold itself responsible for in the United States on return -will be accepted there.

School Drop-Outs

The number of colleges and schools which provide such a special service for Americans and foreigners in Europe is hiossoming. But there are losses

As one lecturer said: "The number is growing, but at the same time some are dropping out, and falling by the way-

Asked whether the growth in the number of schools and colleges in Europe could be attrib-uted to the fact that the average American parent in Europe was in the higher income bracket, and that there was, therefore, money to be made in this business, he said:

"In our college there is no question of all the parents being wealthy. Admittedly, none are poor, and virtually all are in the upper bracket on European standards, But on American standards most work out at a middle level, even though we have a few famous names, But some students don't know where the next franc is coming from.

"Yes, I suppose there is money to be made in running these establishment in Europe, if you are a profit-making concern, but even then it is not easy, especially if you do the job properly."

There is a new breed of young American, who was either born in Europe or has spent his formative years here. Many are studying American curricula at a number of European centers.

study in Europe, or who choose to come to study themselves, are carefully screened before they are admitted, according to one lecturer.

"We are particularly careful about these applicants," he said. "We like to think that wa fulfill a role for Americans, in particular those living in Europe, but American students coming from the States are different alltogether.

We must consider the snoh of the country, and they are appeal angle, and also the drop-out angle. Any student with good qualifications from an American high school or col-lege who applies to come here could get into a good American college, and so he, or she, must have a reason for coming. That is no problem—they come because they want to learn the language or about the culture

"But some students who cannot get decent grades in high schools or colleges in the United States think that they can soma parents sent their children to secondary and college institutions in Europe, even though they could well afford to send them back to the States, simply "to keep them out of harm's way," in terms of political involvement on the campus, or drugs, or other problems.

"Sadly, in other cases, where the parents are living in tha States, it is simply to keep them out of the parents' way," he He was confident that the atmosphere for students was better in Europe, and that student unrest, while present in Europe just as it is in the United States and elsewhere, brought less pressure on the foreign

"Our students are basically interested in studying, although not really more or less than any-

that students at his college had, in fact, identified themselves with student demonstrations in the United States in connection with the American intervention in Cambodia, but stressed that this issue had provoked reactions from all age groups and levels of society in the States.

At the same time they had rejected the presence of "wellversed" students from other colleges who had entered the college and tried to "stir" its students into a more organized reaction.

Is there a drug problem comparable to that in the United States? One lecturer said there was not.

"It is damned difficult to find out about the use of drugs, but certainly there is less pressure on students here to fall in line with the crowd," he said, "In our case we have no dormitories, which is a big help, and in a place like Paris there is a great deal to do which gives students other interests."

The Strike Weapon

deprived of the strike weapon in their collective bargaining with the roads. So it voted the workers a 13 1/2 percent pay raise, while imposing a strike delay. President Nixon wanted the delay, but opposed granting part of a bargaining package by legisiative fiat. Nevertheless he signed the measure.

The unions, however, disregarded congressional consideration, presidential doubts, the law and the national interest, and went on strike. The trains ground to a halt.

The result is a fine tangle of moral and legal issues. But perishable foods and heavy goods were interrupted in transit to the nation's kitchens and factories because the unions considered their own concerns paramount. Their position was not unlike that of the representative from Maryland who. as the clock ticked away the minutes before the deadline, interrupted the urgent husiness of the House to make a speech defending J. Edgar Hoover. It was his right; be doubtless felt a moral compulsion to it—but in the larger context it was out of all proportion to the needs of the moment. Kipling's phrase could be applied to him, as to the strike leaders: There was too much ego in his cosmos. This, indeed, is the great current dilemma of the democracies. The sense of community responsibility has given way before the assertion of the rights or privileges of lesser groups. That the latter suffer in the process seems to them of lesser import than the impulse to exert whatever power they possess. English electrical workers are physical- of the West today.

Congress believed that the railway unions by able to cut down power, so Commons were entitled to some compensation for being debates by candlelight. The radical groups are physically able to plant bombs, so bombs go off. The rail workers can stop the trains, so the trains don't run.

The issues in each case are not matters in which all evil is on one side, and all good on the other. Each can make a case for its exertion of powar. But the results, in terms of everybody's safety and convenience, are devastating.

Only the radicals have a rationale to meet the consequences of their actions. They want to break up "the system." But the nnions simply want a larger share of the pie, and since the pie is not indefinitely expansible, at least for the short haul, the ingredients are thinned out all around after a disturbance that withholds the pastry from

Neo-capitalism, after proceeding through a phase of correcting old inequities, and distributing economic power, through the strike weapon, far more widely, has yet to instill either a philosophy or a rule of law which insures a wise use of that power. In it possible to create such a philosophy or anch a rule? Authoritarian states are not troubled, to any great extent, by that question any more than capitalism was in the days when unions were considered conspiracies and troops regularly were called ont to break strikes. But at a time when and in places where wiser and more humane policies prevail, is there any good way of inculcating, or enforcing, genuine responsibility on both parties to an industrial or service dispute? That is the basic problem confronting most

The United States suffered a serious erosion of credibility with Africa and the Third World when it abstained as the United Nations Security Council condemned Portngal for the recent invasion of Guinea.

Ambassador Yost conceded that the United States has no reason to question a UN investigating team's report fixing responsibility for the attack on Portugal's armed forces. that Washington condemns this action as contrary to the UN Charter, and that it realfirms support for the "legitimate right to self-determination" by the people of Portugal's African territories.

Mr. Yost also noted that in an effort to gain the support of the United States and others, the five African and Asian sponsors bad diluted the Security Council resolution. eliminating a reference to Chapter 7 of the Charter, providing for the use of force and sanctions.

But Mr. Yost abstained, along with Britain, France and Spain, because the resolution went "much too far" and created "presumptions" about future Council action. He viewed the attack on Guinea as "very serious." but could not support the resolution's "very far-reaching conclusions" about it.

The State Department's fears about the resolution are surely groundless and its analysis of the situation in Portoguese Africa is out-of-date and out-of-joint. Just prior to the vote, Max Jakobson of Finland, a member of the UN investigating team in Guinea, emphasized that the resolution as revised did not bind the Council to any particular course of action.

What "far-reaching conclusions" does Washington regard as unwarranted? Does it doubt the resolution's assertion that Portuguese colonialism is "a serious threat to the peace and security of independent African states"? It cannot be unaware of the savage Portuguese bombings of Zambian border towns, supposedly in retaliation for guerrilla activities in Angola.

Lisbon's refusal even to discuss self-determination and independence with the black leaders of its African territories is the root cause of violence and guerrilla war in Portuguese Africa. So long as it persists in this refusal it will be futile for the United States to counsel those leaders to "seek peaceful

Indeed, it will be worse than that. The United States cannot avoid taking sides in the great struggle now gradually escalating in southern Africa. It will not suffice to deliver occasional rebukes to our Portuguese ally while standing aloof from any meaningful action by the United Nations Security

France and NATO

When Gen. de Gaulle withdrew France from the military organization of NATO, he did so to protect her from American hegemony. He certainly did not do this to subsequently place her under German hegemony. To restore a normal situation would thus not betray the general's intentions. Any alliance and any reconciliation must be based on an equality among partners. Experience proves that this equality cannot be upheid without us and that the future of united Europe now depends on a decision that involves our security and our honor.

An Eye on the Kremlin

For some years NATO has given the impression of a sick man who has lost his sense of purpose and does not know why he continues to go on living. The NATO ministerial meeting in Brussels last week has fortunately led to a reversal of this trend.

It has now been made crystal-clear to Moscow that neither in the military nor the diplomatic field can it expect to gain something for nothing or hope to extract concessions from the West merely by sending out what Mr. Rogers, the U.S. secretary of state, described as "esoteric signals" about its good intentions.

It looks, therefore, as If the Russians are still so keen on having their European security conference and on achieving a relaxation of tension in Europe that they are at last prepared to make some concessions on Ber-of importance or urgency"-neither 3,000 miles an hour or sending the Nixon administration nor the telescopes to look at ooter space Democratic Congress is doing more than tinkering with the proolem.

In the name of priorities, Congress has placed the supersonic transport plane into a state of legislative limbo, somewhere between halting the project and limping forward with an insdequate and probably wasteful com-promise budget. In the same cause, sewers were matched against space stations on the floor of the Senate while loans to Latin America were held up for judgment beside water facilities in Arkansas.

The executive branch, meanwhile, is working up its priorities, through a diffuse procedure that somehow balances the keeping of woops in Europe against the interest in revenue-sharing with the states or subsidies to the maritime industry against more aid to

President Nixon must at least begin his effort with a roundhouse target figure of permissible ex-penditures in the coming fiscal year-an inhibition that Congress does not care to impose on itself even for a budget year that is already half over. But neither branch of government has yet derised an orderly process for truly ranking its net judgments of the importance or urgency of competing claims on the national energy. And there is hardly any collaboration between the branches in the procedures that are em-

Past and Present

What appears to count most. sources is a vaguely determined climate of public opinion, the commitments and momentum inherited from the past, and the variously weighted influence of contending pressure groups and government agencies. In the case of the SST plane, environmentalists and others clamoring for "new priorities" met head-on with the Nixon administration, the ze-ospace industry and labor lobbyists and fought their way to a draw.

Now a small group of legislators, lighting against a Christmas deadline, must "compromise" the matter without knowing very much about the value of spending half the amount that had hitherto been termed irreducible. Those wanting new priorities have no means of channeling the saved money to other projects and those wishing to "save" the aerospace industry have come to this point with no alternative proposals.

Moreover, even when the issue of priorities is formally raised in Congress, as in the Senate debate to spend $500 million instead of $350 million for sewage and water systems, the members are asked to weigh whatever pairing of problems seems oppropriate to the

Sen. John O. Pastore said he agreed with these challenges but pleaded for "pragmatic" support of the lower figure lest veterans and the elderly who stood to gain from other parts of the bill got nothing at all.

Which Side Up

A feeling that priorities are "upside down," in Gore's phrase, ran through most of the dcbate and led many of the Senate's internationalists toward an aggressive demand that the nation first look after itself. The same general sentiment is thought to have led the Senate to vote against more funds for the SST, and it has evoked calls that some administration proposals be rejected al-most as a matter of principle.

"This is one further example of how we abdicate to the Budget Burean one of the principal elements of government." Fullyight asserted. "The budget becomes nothing but the fiscal hand of the President. It is the executive again telling the Congress that we have nothing but a ceremonial duty to approve of what the executive wishes . . .

"The people they consult with already have sewers. The people in the Penisgon and the Shoreham Hotel have not the slightest idea concerning people in a small town who need sewers." Nixon would hardly agree that the Congress merely does his bidding. But like most Presidents of the last 50 years, he proposes a budget that more or less defines the course of debate and the legislators have no direct influence on his decisions. The President's of-fering is itself the result of intense lobbying and compromise among public and private agencies. And once designed, his budget is tossed to Congress for piecemeal and often contradictory consideration.

Hence the frustration and the often negative tone sounded on Capitol Hill. The legislators, aligned small and competing factions of their own, struggle to add a bit here and delete something The President, far from seeing them as representatives of the people's will, fights to defend his original budget design, denouncing the members for causing inflation when they wish to spend more and for causing unemployment when they move to spend

It is quite a scramble, exacerbated as usual, by the rush to get home for the holidays. In the confusion, the Congress often defeats its own concern for prioritles by writing conglomerate bills that would require a simple yesor-no vote-for instance, on Social Security benefits combined with new trade restrictions combined with a massive welfare reform, ing labor relations, the fight against Faced with that kind of choice, most members, as well as administration officials, are beginning to scale and to be faced on interna-Monday, Sen. Officer During War But he always had politics in mind and was president of the Oxford Union. Soon after the war, in which he became a lieutenant colonel, he won a seat in the House of Commons.

Heath sees politics more in terms of practical policies and executive attitudes than ideological distinctions. In his first difficult year as prime minister he seems to have been working to change the political mixture from a middle ground between moderates of both parties into a reflection of the Tory center itself. A commentator here-once wrote:

"How you indge Mr. Heath's posture-indeed that of any politi- Evidently unknown to Mr. Gal-If you are on the right, he looks leftish and on some issues he is. If you are on the left, he looks rightish and on some issues he is." Heath considers himself a man of catholic, all-round views and not particularly marked by the influence of any man, although he freely acknowledges debts to Churchill, Eden and Macmillan,

On this kind of broad subjecthis interest in a multiplicity of things—he talks with easy freedom. He sees himself subject to many broad influences—people, the sea, music, mountains.

At 54 he is a vigorous, ruddy man who likes to read a lot, walk whenever he can, occasionally play golf. He enjoys wine, watching ballet, attending opera, theater. He greatly functed driving fast cars before his present position put a stop to that. He relishes travel, pictures, srchitecture. Before he became prime minister he would often fly off to European art ex-

Such interests are reflected in his reading which most recently included a new history of the Tory party, a work on the American painter Whistler and a book on the yacht Intrepld, by the sall-ing U.S. chief of protocol, Bus Mosbacher. Heath himself is a comparatively recent but highly expert and enthusiastic yachtsman.

Music Above All

However, Heath's consuming love remains music. He is pos-sessed by no overwhelming invorite composer, although he has a wide range of familiarity because of his occasional liking to conduct and his devotion to the organ and piano. Strangely enough, his approach to music is similar to his approach to politics....

His tastes are broad and he believes one must judge individual works rather than the composers. Obviously, as an organist and planist, he has "a foundation" of Bach but he can develop enormous admiration for Beethoven. Brahms, Bruckner, Mahler or moderns such as Vaughn Wil-

Heath's versatility is not a new phenomenon for a prime minister. Only in recent years one has seen in 10 Downing Street Winston Churchill-orator, writer, painter and erstwhile athlete—and Harold Macmillan-golfer, expert shot and habitue of the literary world.

The test of Heath's success, however. will come in his ability to meet hard practical problems in a hard practical way. In Britain there is now a problem of this sort, involvinflation and the whole economic future. More tests, on a nuger tional horizons, are what bring him to Washington next week.

On the straight military side, the problem is so frightening because it is essentially open-ended. To see what this means, you need only suppose that the canal-crossing is attempted for which the Soviets are now actively preparing the Egyptians.

The Soviet general staff cannot possibly contemplate putting the Reyptian tanks and infantry across the Suez Canal without giving the Egyptians the advantage of air supremacy. The book says that in a tank battle in the desert the side having air supremacy is bound to win. The Soviet planners un-questionably believe the book. That means a battle in Sinal

Israelis Are Confident What will happen then? The Israelis confidently believe that their magnificent armored forces can write a new chapter in the book by smashing the Egyptians despite air supremacy on the other side. Probably they are right. But if they are right, the Soviets cer-tainly cannot stop there.

Galbraith Rebutted

John Kenneth Galbraith's review of what he calls a "troubling book," Heinz Mode's "The Woman in Indian Art" (IHT Dec. 8 viz "Book World") is itself troubling; troubling that a book review on Indian art would be assigned to Mr. Galbraith, who evidently knows precious little about Indian art, and even more troubling that, under the circumstances, he would ac-cept it. In keeping with the throwtogether nature of the review as a whole, Mr. Galbraith, in order to achieve an effect, casts aspersions upon one Hemrich Zimmer, whom he sarcastically and ignorantly refers to as perhaps the only person who had read Mode's cian-depends on your start line, braith, Heinrich Zimmer, who died around 1943, while a professor at Columbia University, was one of the greatest scholars of Indian art woman, a man lives un and civilization. The 'Used' Woman

I have cut out Rev. S. J. Gates's letter (IHT, Dec. 1) to keep it for posterity as case material for future students of history, as a classic example of the greatest, most successful brainwash ever undertaken: the anti-sex teachings of the Christian Church.

For centuries it has corrupted innocent human beings to the point where they believe that the sexual drive and its fulfillment is sinfulexcept when given the official "goshead" by the Church. How is it possible to believe in a religion which cruelly, systematically con-

New England To Sue Over Quotas on Oil

Constitution Challenge Forms Basis of Case

By Bernard D. Nossiter WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 (WP). Angered hy rising oil prices and fuel shortages, New England's six overnors have launched a legal attack aimed at toppling the barriers limiting U.S. oil imports.

The governors of Maine, Ver-mont, New Hampshire, Massachn-setts, Rhode Island and Connecticut instructed their attorneys general last week to prepare a sult challenging the oil import quota system on constitutional grounds. State legal officers were ordered to determine whether oil firms had

Industrial Output Stagnant, Report In France Shows

PARIS, Dec. 10 (Reuters) .-French industrial production held steady in October with the output index unchanged from September's 159, tha Finance Ministry said today.

The index, based on 1962 equaling 100, stood at 155 in October last year.

The moving three-month scale published by the ministry shows a production stagnation, with the index fluctuating around the 158 to 159 level for the last six months, down from the March-April-May level of 160.

On the general economic outlook for 1971, André Malterre, chairman of the French Economic and Social Council, said yesterday it will be difficult for the nation to attain the projected 5.7 percent growth in gross national product while keeping within the 3 percent limit on price rises forecast by tha government in its budget.

To achieve the 5.1 percent growth In domestic consumption forecast by the authorities, intermediary stimulant measures may be needed by the government, he said.

Car sales this year are ex pected to total some 8.4 million, down from 9.6 million in 1969. Ford said that of the 1.2 million decline, "we estimate that 500,000 were lost because of depressed economic conditions and about 700,000 as a result of the Oeneral Motore strike."

On Spending

Ford'e estimated 1971 spending, of $700 million, includes some $230 million, or 40 percent, for overseas facilities. The total compares with expendi-tures of about $580 million this year and would top the previous record of $692.5 million in 1966. On the cutlook for the gen-

The 100 Pipers Legend.

Our legend claims if you sip a perfect Scotch you'll hear 100 pipers play. That's a lot of Pipers. But then 100 Pipers is a lot of Scotch.

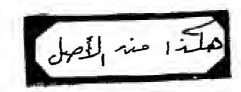

100 Pipers Scotch Whisky, Bottled in Scotland, Created with the skill that has made Seagram the world's largest distiller.

AUSTRALIAN LAND AND PROPERTY FUND LIMITED

NOTICE OF MEETING

Notice is hereby given that the annual general meeting of Australian Land and Property Fund Limited will be held at the registered office of the company, Bahamas International Trust Building, Bank Lane, Nassau, Bahamas on Tuesday, the 29th day of December, A.D. 1920 at 10:00 a.m. for the following purposes:

- 1. To receive the report of the directors and the accounts for the year ended 30th September 1970.
- 2. To elect directors for the ensuing year.
- 3. To appoint auditors for the ensuing year.
- 4. To discuss any other business that may be transacted at an ordinary general meeting.

In the view of the board of directors it now appears unlikely that audited accounts will be available to shareholders for consideration at this meeting and in this event :: is proposed to adjourn the meeting to 12th February, 1971, at the same time and place as the original meeting when it is expected that the audited accounts will have been distributed to shareholders.

A registered shareholder entitled to attend and vote at the above meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, may appoint a recoxy to attend and vote on his behalf and such person need not be a member,

A holder of bearer shares estitled to vote must prove his capacity of shareholder by presenting to the meeting the certificate for shares of which he is the owner.

By order of the board of directors for and behalf of BAHAMAS INTERNATIONAL TRUST COMPANY LIMITED Secretaries.

3d December, 1970.

The secret of a dry martini is Martini Dr You would have to be pretty perverse to make a martini cocktail without Martini vermouth. Other matters, like which gin you choose and the number of times the potion should be stirred, are a matter of personal taste and experiment.

But when it comes down to the vermouth you use, Martini happens to be the name of the game.

The North-South partnership reached a contract of six clubs on the diagramed deal, relying diamond lead. South would have no choice but to continue on a four-four fit in that suit. North overbid. His one-bid of three hearts over hearts was certainly acceptable, and chould have produced a fourclub bid from South. However. South bid three no-trump on the optimistic assumption that his partner held something in hearts. North made another cue-bid, and continued to six clubs when South showed that suit at the five-level.

Six clubs could have been defeated at once if West had led the diamond ace and another diamond, but not unnaturally, he did not do this. He led the heart king, which was ruffed in the dummy.

South could not afford to draw trumps at once, so he led a diamond to the king, and West won with the ace and persevered with a second high heart.

This was gratifying to South, who ruffed in dummy, cashed the queen and jack of clubs, and entered his hand with a spade lead to draw the last trumps and claim the slam. West missed several chances.

A shift to a spade would probably have been successful, although South could have survived double-dummy by winning in his hand, ruffing a heart with a club honor, and eventually drawing trumps by

THE ship Betsy Ross, whose voyage around the globe makes up the odyssey of this beautifully written first novel is a relic of the war. Originally a Liberty ship designed neither for looks nor comfort, she has somehow evaded both the mothball and the blowtorch and more by perseverance than by innate ability lives up to her schedule as a bauler of. freight. She carries in her capacious hold only stuff not perishable; marble, sisal, hemp and, when she is lucky, cases of brandy. She creaks her way from port to port; anywhere, in fact, where her home office thinks there is a dollar to be made. Her crew too are relics, gutted husks of human-ity, working through biological tropisms away from pain toward the fulfillment of bodily needs. They drink, they whore, they fall into animal forgetfulness. And in between they do only as much work as allows them to lurch from one state to another. They are marine existentialists, men for the moment. For them 5,000 years of culture fall away in a moment. They emerge from the ship when in port as from a cave; and with spear and club seek women, intoxicating bever-ages, physical pleasure. It is not a case of sitting in judgment on their existence. No one has the formula for the good life. and Mr. Appleman, a poet and teacher is not so arrogant as to suggest one. But his crew, in spite of its abilities, is as near to primitive man as one can come and still be counted part of today's world.

This is not true of course, of every soul on board. It is one of the author's more conspicuous qualities that he can create and manipulate symbols unobtrusively. They are there as part of the fabric of the book, making their narrative contribution to the story, yet available for contemplation outside their narrative function. The symbols, in short, are there.

Three of the characters form a triptych against the backdrop of ship and crew. One is Kravitz, a seaman from Detroit, who is all evil the Claggart of the Betsy Ross. In another age, say that of Mel-ville or the Elizabethans, Kravitz would be all evil, part of the motiveless malignity that strives for mastery in the universe But Mr. Appleman is as much a child of the time as the rest of us, product of an age that sees our lives determined by economic, psychological and recently by behavioral forces beyond our control. So he has invented for Kravitz a brutal father, a weak mother and an indifferent environment. But I think he would bave had in this character a figure of almost classical stat-

Thoeni Says He'll Go Downhill to Ski Title

SESTRIERE, Italy, Dec. 10 (AP).—Italian slalom ace Gustavo Thoeni, the youngest of the world's ski stars, predicts he will win the 1970-1971 edition of the Alphne ski World Cup. which gets under way Saturday.
Thoeni, 19, said he has greatly improved in the downhili since last season. That's the category in which he needed improvement. The Italian placed third in the past World Cup standings behind Austria's Karl Schranz, the winner for the second straight year, and Patrick Russel of France. No Downhill Points

"Schranz will be the man to beat again this year." Thoeni said. "He is 32, but he has tremendous class and experience. Schranz, however, is a man who is always expected to win and he will have to bear the pressure of his fans and of the press for this."

Thoeni last year won the World Cup for the giant slalom and was fourth in the special sislom. He picked up no points for the downhill. The World Cup overall standings are made of placings and points in all three specialties. "Last year I badly missed the points in the downhill." Thoeni said. "You have to place at least among the top ten to get a point and I never made it. But this year I have improved a lot, and I have also picked up experience in the slalom."

Thoeni said that training in Chile this summer and in Italy in autumn has carried him much closer to the top world downbillers. "Im sure I'll manage to get

Thoeni said he expected more competition from Bernard Russi of Switzerland, who won the world downhill championships in Val Gardena in February, than from the big French team.

Criticizes Referee In Ali's Fight

ROME, Dec. 10 (UPI).-The secretary general of the European Boxing Union asked for an explanation yesterday from New York boxing officials after disputing the way referee Mark Conn handled the Muhammad Ali-Oscar Bonavena heavyweight fight.

Pietro Pini said he saw "clearly" on television that Conn did not make the mandatory eight count after the first two 15th-round knockdowns of Bonavens.

"This does not conform with universal rules and also is dangerous," said Pini in a telegram sent to Edwin Dooley, head of the New York State Athletic Commission. "I am asking courteously for an explanation," Pini said. Clay won the fight on a technical knockout in the 13th when Conn stopped the fight under a New York rule calling for an automatic halt after three knockdowns.

a walking human being sets foot on their turf. Such screaming of horns and pounding of cylinders as they now indulge in at the sight of some in-nocently offending walker would have been unthinkable, eveo among the lower priced cars, five or six years ago.

Now. however, disgraceful tautrums are routine even among the most sedate ma-chines. Just the other day in the broad, densely populated reaches of upper Connecticut Avenue an Oldsmobile scarcely more than a year old, became so incensed at the sight of a woman oo a crosswalk that it increased its already rapid gait aod raced at her with barking horn, compelling her to run for her life.

As it went by, its master, nearly purple with embarrass-ment, could be seen working his jaw violently up and down, shricking, no doubt, that if it dented the wretched woman walker its weekly wash-andwax job would be withheld until it learned how to behave in public.

The car, however, was undaunted. No woman could deprive this Oldsmobile of its right-of-way without paying for it, the outraged machine intimated, through an inordinate amount of acceleration coise and exhaust roar.

The poor woman, assisted to the curb by a fellow walker, was revived without artificial resuscitation. "I never thought I'd live to see the day when an Oldsmobile wouldn't let me share the street," she sighed. To the old days. I would have expected it of a Nash or a Willys. But an Oldsmobile!"

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Dr. D.B. Dotty, the wellknown authority oo auto psy-chology, defends the cars. To say that the automobile's increasing hostility to people on foot signifies the onset of some nervous affliction is a calumny against the machine that has made this country great, Dr. Dotty told David Frost not loog ago.

Io fact, Dr. Dotty argues, the American automobile has for years been one of this nation's most viciously oppressed minori-ties. Its natural desire for unimpeded progress, he said, has heen thoughtlessly frustrated by city authorities who have instal-led an elaborate and hypocritical system of pedestrianist controls designed to make the automobile pause while walkers use the streets that are rightly

"The movement," as Dr. Dotty calls this new insolence of the cars. "is, in fact, oothing more untoward than an auto-libera-tion movement." The slogan of auto-lib, Dr. Dotty says, is "all atreets to the cars."

There is no point in trying to interview cars: at least there is no point in it for anyone who has ever been a pedestrian. The cars simply will not respond to him. Occasionally, however, they will talk to another car. Let the reader heware, how-

Take the warning of one who knows from experience. Rugo Debilbao sent his family Ford out one night to find why the other cars all brayed and roared and apit exhaust at his wife whenever she tried to walk across an intersection with 200 pounds of groceries. Wheo the car came back oext morning, it refused to speak to Rugo, Smoldering with anger, Rugo got into the car to go buy some tranquilizers. Approaching an intersection which he had a greeu light he saw a woman on foot. She was crossing with 200 pounds of groceries. Hugo's car roared fury in horn and motor as it lunged forward to scare 25 years off the woman's life. Now, Hugo cannot resist the Fortunately this mother cat will accept newcomers in her litter. I only have two mother cats that will do that. She's got four of her own, but their eyes aren't open yet."

In Rome, Mrs. Fetti is known as "Le Signora Gatta." Every day for the last 30 years, she or her maid has made the rounds to feed the 40 to 160 cats that roam the streets in her area: the Pantheon, Piazza Capranica and Piazza Santa Maria Sopra Minerva.

In modern Rome, there are special laws protecting cats. In 1945, it became a crime to kill cats for food. Twelve years ago, the city gave the Society for Protection of Animals land, near Ostia, where some 500 cats are now eared for. The city council has been discussing the possibility of establishing a cat city but the plan has now been shelved for lack of funds.
